

Brow Beauty Basics

With eyes serving as a window to the soul, eyebrows perform the function of framing that window. A beautifully shaped, well-groomed frame is as essential as the window itself.

Dallas-based beauty expert, Christi Harris, offers a technique for perfectly groomed brows, sans waxing, tweezing or threading. Precision Brow Planing™ is her answer to the problems associated with those methods that remove the hair from the root, often causing redness, irritating the skin, and permanently damaging the hair follicles. The wild success of her method has allowed her to expand the brand and she recently opened a Precision Brow Planing Bar in New York City's Time Warner Center. "It's not just about offering services; what makes us so successful is the education that goes behind it," Harris explained.

Take a minute to learn the methods she has been teaching well-groomed ladies all across North America.

Prepare Your Workspace

•First brush the brow hairs upward with the Brow Lash Groomer, then trim excess length on top and sides with the Precision Brow Planing Scissors.

Mark Your Shape

- To prepare for hair removal, work with the bone structure to determine your natural shape.
- Brows should begin at the corner of the eye.
- Arch should peek just over the center of the iris.
- Determine your natural endpoint by measuring from the bottom of the nose to the outside corner of the eye.

Plane A Perfect Arch

- Using the Brow Planing Tool flat against the skin, plane the top of the brow to the natural arch, avoiding the actual peak of the brow.
- Repeat the technique from the side along the tail of the brow.
- Avoid turning your eyebrow into a hook when tending to the straggling strays on the underside of the brow. Follow the natural growth pattern and keep the lines smooth and tapered.
- Use a scraping motion with the resin coated safety blade placed flatly on the skin to tend to new growth.
- But beautiful brow maintenance doesn't end there. Coloring the brows each morning should be part of your morning makeup ritual. Check out ChristiHarris.com for further tips on applying color and sealing a perfect shape each day.
